

Volunteering Victoria announces the launch of VolPoll – A Volunteer Engagement Tool

Volunteering Victoria announces the launch of its free engagement tool for volunteers and small/medium groups, clubs organisations. The new product, including VolPoll+ aims to further strengthen the volunteering sector in Victoria.

“The Victorian Government is delighted to support Volunteering Victoria’s new initiative – VolPoll. Volunteers are so important to our community and having this thorough assessment tool will benefit volunteers, their managers and organisations, and the wider community” says Anthony Carbines, Parliamentary Secretary for Carers and Volunteers.

“We are pleased to provide the sector with a premium free product that allows volunteers and volunteer managers to better understand their volunteering impact and gain in-depth insights” says Scott Miller, Chief Executive of Volunteering Victoria.

“By gaining insights, VolPoll present a contemporary understanding of what effective volunteer engagement involves for managers” adds Miller.

“It was integral to address the changes in volunteer involvement and provide the sector with a product that addresses the continuous evolution of volunteer engagement strategies” says Miller.

VolPoll is available to volunteers and leaders of organisations, clubs and groups from 18 May 2020.
